

John Miologos
Corporate Vice President,
Worldwide Architecture, Design, and Construction
McDonald's Corporation

John Miologos is a development executive, with more than twenty-five years of experience, leading architectural, engineering and design groups delivering measurable impact on existing restaurant profitability and new restaurant growth. He co-founded the current organizational structure, which delivers professional architectural and engineering services to the field organization.

John currently holds the position of Corporate Vice President in Worldwide Architecture, Design and Construction for McDonald's, playing a key leadership role on the design and development of new growth concepts. Among his prior positions are Development Director, Architectural Project Manager and Project Architect. Additionally, he sits on several technical and design advisory boards for architectural and construction organizations.