SCHOLARSHIPS & GRANT MAKING

Ronald McDonald House Charities awards grants to non-profit organizations for programs that directly improve the health and well being of children.

National and international grant requests are reviewed two times per year by a 20-plus-member Board of Trustees in Oak Brook, Ill., comprised of health professionals, business and civic leaders, and McDonald's representatives.

Local Chapters of Ronald McDonald House Charities support Ronald McDonald Houses and other children's programs in their communities. They are run by boards comprised of members of the local medical community, business and civic leaders, parents/volunteers, and McDonald's representatives.

HISTORY

The first Ronald McDonald House opened in Philadelphia in 1974 as the result of the perseverance and dedication of Fred Hill, then a Philadelphia Eagles football player. After his daughter, Kim, was treated for leukemia at the local children's hospital, Hill became determined to help other families faced with the same situation. Very few institutions at that time provided sufficient accommodations for such families, and Dr. Audrey Evans, a pediatric oncologist at Children's Hospital, suggested that a "home away from home" was needed. Hill enlisted the help of his teammates and the local McDonald's restaurant franchisees to raise funds to purchase and renovate the first House.
